ZACHARY FLETT

Zachary Flett is a First Nations entrepreneur from Sagkeeng First Nation and the founder of IndigiHub.

He started IndigiHub because he saw how difficult it could be for Indigenous entrepreneurs to find funding, resources, opportunities, and the right people to connect with. What started as an idea has grown into a platform reaching Indigenous entrepreneurs across Canada, with more than 150,000 organic impressions in its first year.

Zachary also leads Neechie Nights, a networking series built around bringing Indigenous entrepreneurs and community together in a way that feels real, welcoming, and actually useful.

A big part of his work is making sure Indigenous people are not just invited into business spaces, but are helping shape them.

For Zachary, entrepreneurship is about more than building a business. It is about opening doors, creating opportunities, and helping make the path a little easier for the next person coming up.
